

Ms. 41 (77)

---

THE
Last East-Indian
Voyage.

---

CONTAINING MUCH
varietie of the State of the severall kingdomes where they haue traded:
*with the Letters of three severall Kings
to the Kings Maiestie of England,*
begun by one of the Voyage: since continued out of the faithfull observations of them that are come home.

(..)

---

55. b. 142.

AT LONDON,

---

Printed by T. P. for Walter Burre.

1606.

To the Reader.

READER,

THe beginner of this relation following, would no doubt if he had liued haue himselfe set it out to thy good liking: but this I assure thee, that both his & this continuation of it is set forth with as much faithfulness as could be gathered out of the best obseruations of them that are come home. If I find it to thy liking, looke shortly for an exact and large discourse written by Maister Scot chiefe factor at Bantam, euer since the first voyage, containing what soeuer hath happened since their first Arriuall there to trade in those parts: reade this, looke for the other, and soe farewell.

VV. B.

THE LAST EAST INDIAN VOYAGE.

Containing many memorable matters of the state of the Countreys where they haue traded. March
the 23. 1604.

Being provided of all thinges necellarie for so long a Voyage,
with leaue taken of the Gouver-nour, and others of the Commi-ties, wee departed from Graues- end the 25. of March, being <sup>the 23. of March</sup> Sunday at night, and the tuesday
following came to the Downes,

where the Generall before wee came to an anchor, gaue order to the Purser to call the company, and take their names: which being done, there was found 40 men lacking of the copelment of our Ship, so that wee were forced thereby to come to anchor, to tarrie for them. The Generall gaue order presently the Pinnesse should be man'd, and sent the Master with his brother, and the Purser for better dispatch to Sandwich, where they escaped verie neere drowning. The Assention Pinnesse likewise put off to set their Pilate a land, and so was cast away: which when the Generall heard of, he

The last East-Indian Voyage.

was exceeding angry with Captaine Stiles that hee would offer to go a land at such a time without his order. The last of March the Master, Captaine Middleton, and the masters Mate came aboard. The first of Aprill, we weighed anchor in the Downes and twarthe Douer, we found our men in Ketches readie to come aboard, wee tooke them all into our shippe, being 28 men, which was farr short of that number wee expected. But howsoever the Generall was determined to proceede, although hee lacked fortie men, rather than loose the benefite of so faire a winde: so the same day of Beachey, the Generall gaue order to the Boatswayne to take new muster of our men; and he found wee had twentie more than our copelment aboard the Admirall, and trarrying to speake with the rest of the ships, wee hal'd them one after another, and found they had euerie ship more than their copelment; the cause of which errour, could not bee imagined without fowle weather caused them to hide themselves, at such time of generall muster; or else that some of them misdoubting they should be set on land, played least in sight: but howsoever, this over-plus of men was as grieuous to the Generall as the lacke he had afore. To see how he had been deluded to come to anchor with a faire wind for lacke of men, and now of force must put into some place to set them againe a land. So the Generall gaue order to the Master, hee should haue a care he did not passe Plimouth that night, for that hee was minded to put in there to discharge those men. So the next day morning at day breake, wee were readie with racks aboard to stand into the sound of Plimouth: and stood in a good while, till such time as it began to be guffie weather. And the wind to fouther vpon vs, fo that we were enforced againft the Generals liking, to proceed on our Voyage fteering alongft the land with much winde, and in the afternoone we loft fight of England; and fo continuing our courfe with a faire wind, vpon thurſday being the 6. day of Aprill, wee were twarth Cape Fenneſter, and the 7 day, of the Rocke. And vpon Eaſter day being the 8 day, of Cape Saint Vincences with the wind large, and faire wearher; and continuing our courſe till the 15, wee came to the Canaries, where in the calmes, triall was made to take in the Hectors boat, but ſhee could not ſtoe her, by reaſon ſhe was both too long, and too broad, which if ſhe could haue done, the Generall was minded not to touch in any place til he doubled the Cape: ſo that was the principall cauſe he went to the Iſlands of Cape-de-uerde, ſo the ſame night wee departed from the Canaries, and directed our courſe for Maio, one of the foreſayd Iſlands.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 22. day, we had ſight of Bõa Viſta: the 24. day we anchored at Maio vpon the ſouth-weſt ſide, where the Generall with the reſt of the Captaines and merchants went a land to ſeek ſreſh water: but there was none to be found but a ſmall Well, which would yeeld ſcarſe a Hogſ-head a day. Preſently after our landing, there came to our General a Porringale that had wounded one of his fellowes, deſiring to ſaue his life, and vpon that conditiõ he would giue him al the welth he had, which was ſome 500. dried Goats. The Generall would giue no eare to him nor his requeſt, for that he would giue no occaſion of offence, to them of the Iſland, yet by intreaty of the Viſe admirall & the other

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Captaine ~~he~~ was contented to take his Goats and him aboard, which presently was effected; also the same after-noon, there came two Portingales more of the Island to our Generall, who came verie kindly vnto him and bad him welcome, so after some discourse the Generall desired them that for his money, he might buy some liue goats of them for the refreshing of his men, they presently made answer againe, they would sell none but that we might kill as many as wee would, and no bodie would be offended thereat, and so presently they went with the Generall, and shewed him how we should enclose them, and so set our dogs vpon them; and hauing killed halfe a dozen of goats, they tooke their leaue in friendly maner for that night, promising in the morning to returne and bring their dogs with them, and to helpe vs to so many Goats as wee would desire, so the Generall with all the rest came presently aboard.

The next day, the Generall would not goe a land, but sent Captaine Stiles, Captaine Keeling, and Captaine Middletom, with expresse order to keepe their people from straggling, and when all their companie were landed, Captaine Stiles called them all together; giueing them warning to keepe companie together, and not range one from the other, which speech was reiterated againe by Maister Durham laying, that who-soeuer was found straggling, should be seuerely punished, and therefore willed them all to take good heed. And so after this warning giuen, they marched vp into the countrie to kill some Goates, where they met with two Portugals, which did assist them in all the might: in the meane while they were at their sport a land, The Generall

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Generall with thoreft, were busie in flowing the Heertors long boot, for that he was minded, to goe to Sea
so soone as they had done, but they could not stowe
her; without cutting of her stem: & part of her bowes,
which seeing no other way, was presentlie effected.
And so drawing toward night, our land men repaired aboorde, with some few Goates they had killed. And after supper the wind comming of the land, the Generall gaue order to the Maister to wey, and that a warning peece might be shot of. And so presently the Cable was brought to capstaine and our shippe was presently loose, but before we had vp our anker, Captaine Stiles sent word one of their Marchants was missing so that wee came presently to Anker againe, and did ride till day. Hee that lost himselfe, was the par-tie which was so carefull to giue other men warning, which tooke none himselfe. Day no sooner appearing, but the Generall sent Captaine Stiles with at least 150. men to seeke for him. And if it were possible to speake with some of the Portugals: but all that day was spent in vaine, and no news of him; so the Generall would spend no longer time there, but left him to learne the language: so the 16. of May wee passed the line where many of our men fell sicke of the Scuruy, Calenture, Bloudy flux, and the Wormes, being left to the mercie of God, and a smale quantitie of Lyman iuyce euery morning: our phisition snipt for that purpose being as vnwilling as ignorant in any thing that might helpe them. A great oversight in the company, and no doubt wilbe better lookt to hereafter.

And to our proceeding voyage the 13. day of July being Friday we had sight of Cape, Bona, Espanja, the

The last East-Indian Voyage.

wind at South-west, a gentell gale the Generall commaunded the tackes a boord intending to go about the cape. But our sick men cryed out most lamentably, for at that present there were sicke of the scuruy at the least 80. men in our ship, not one able to helpe the other, who made a petition to the Generall most humbly entreating him for Gods sake to saue there liues, and to put in for Saldania other wayes they were but dead men. The Generall perusing there pitifull complaint, and looking out of his cabin dore, where did attend a swarme of lame and weake diseased criples, who behoulding this lamentable sight, extended his compassion towards them. And graunted their requests: that night the wind came vp at the South and continued tell the 17. day before we could get into the rode. The next morning being Wednesday the Generall went on land, with prouision to set vp tents, & a little way from our landing place, the Negroes had their houses: which were no other then a few croked sticks set in the grownd, and mattes cast ouer them, and they had great store of Cattell, both beeves and sheepe grasing faire by them. Our Generall and the captains went to barter with them for small peeces of Iron, and bought some 12. sheepe, and more would haue sold vs, till that they saw vs begin to set vp our tents, which as it seemed, was to their disliking; for that incontinent they pulled downe their houses, and made them fast vpon their Beasts backes, and did driue away; yet all meanes possible was sought to drawe them to sell vs more: but in no case they would abide any longer with vs, but droue away with all the speed they might. It lay in the generals power to haue taken them all from them.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

them, as some counſelled him to doe, but he in no caſe would giue care therevnto; but let them depart, not doubting but that they would returne againe, ſeeing we offered them no wrong, when it was in our powers to diſpoſſeſſe them of all their cattell. The 19. day we got our ſicke men on land, and the 20. our boats were ſent to the Iſland, where wee found ſuch infinite number of ſeales, that it was admirable to behold, all the ſea ſhore lyes ouer ſpread with them, ſome ſleeping, ſome traueſſing into the Iſland, and ſome to the ſea ward: Beſides all the Rockes which lie a prettie diſtance off ſo full as they can hold, thouſands at a time going, and as many coming out: there bee many of them as bigge as any Beare, and as terrible to behold. And vptowards the middle of the Iſland, there be infinite numbers of fowles called Pengwines, Pellicans, and Cormerants, The Pengwines bee as bigge as our greateſt Capons wee haue in England, they haue no winges nor cannot flye, but you may driue them by thouſands in a flocke whether you will, they bee exceeding fatte, but their fleſh is verie ranke, for that they liue vpon fiſh, there bee ſo many of them vpon this ſmall Iſland, which is not about 5. miles about, to lade a ſhippe of 50 tonnes with all. Vpon Sunday the 23 the firſt man that died out of our ſhip. Vpon monday morning the Generall went into the Countrey to buy freſh victuals, but the people of the countrey ſeeing ſo many in company fled. But the General cauſed all the company to make a ſtand, and then ſent 4. to them with a bottell of wine, and victuals, with a Ta-ber, and a Pipe, they ſeeing no more in company came to them, and did eate, drinke, and daunce with them

The last East-Indian Voyage.

them so they seeing with what kindes they were vsed, tooke hart vnto them and came along with our Generall to our tents, where they had many toys bestowed vpon them. As pins, points, beads, and branches, & so they returned all very well pleased making signes to returne the next day with Cattell, but foule wether preuented them for 3 dayes. The forth day after being the 26. they brought vs 44. sheepe, and the next day 23. sheepe and two kine, and the next day 15. sheepe and one bullocke, and the 30 day we bought 120. sheepe and 6. Beeves, the next day 9. sheepe and three beeves, and the 2. of August 3. sheepe. The 3. of August: the Generall went in his pinnes and other boats with him to kill whales, for all the bay is full of them, they strooke diuers with harping Irons, and especially they in the Susans pinnes stroake their harping Iron into one of them very sure, and veered their boate a good scope from her, shee feeling her selfe wounded, towed the boat for the space of halfe an hower, vp and downe the bay, with such swiftnesse that the men were faine to go all of them and sit in the starne, and let the whale tow them, which was with such swiftnes that she seemed to flie, but in the end they were Inforced to cut their rope, to keepe their boat from sincking, they were caried so swiftly throw the Sea. The next that stroak one, was in the Generals pinnes, and there were two of them together, and their fortune was to strike a young one, which plaid like reakes, as the first did, and continued for a good time and then they hal'd vp the boat somewhat neere, and wounded her in diuers places with iauellins, the great whale all this time would not depart from the

*Aug. 2.
and so full
of whales.*

The last East-Indian Voyage.

little one although it had receiued many wounds, but stood to the last to fight it out against al our boats, sometimes giuing one boat a blow, and sometimes another, and would come vnder our boats, and lift them almost out of the water, she bellowed one bange on the Generals Pinnesse, that split all the timbers and boards, so that he was faine to take another boat to saue himselfe for she was presely full of water, yet with much a doe they saued the Pinnesse, & brought her on land, where it cost all our Carpenters three dayes worke to repaire her. And when the young Whale began to be wearie, the old one would take the young vpon his backe and carrie him, but the old one seeing that would not preuaile against vs, would leaue his carriage, and betake himselfe to his fight, which was to cast his tayle out of the water, and to strike so valiantly, that if hee had taken any of our boats with one of these blowes, he would haue split it all to peeces. It was verie good sport to stand and looke on, but verie dangerous to them in the boats: To conclude of this matter, the young Whale could not be killed till the sunne set, the old one neuer forsaking her whilst it had any life. So after it was dead, wee towed it to our landing place, and at hye water hal'd it so hye as we could. The occasion why we killed this Whale, was for lacke of oyle for our lampes, for in all the shippes we had great lacke, the oyle was put in verie bad caske, and leaked out. But whereas wee hoped to haue had oyle inough out of this Whale to haue serued all our turnes, it did scarce yeeld foure gallons it was so young and leane.

The 8 day, the Generall sent a dozen of our men to buy fresh victuals, for that wee had not any left.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

So they were out all day, and brought home but two sheepe at their returne, which was late, the Generall demaunded of the Purser of the Hector, which was cheefe purueyer, what was the occasion they staid out so long, and that they brought no more cattell. He answered, that the people had sold them good store of cattell, which hee had payd for, but being so fewe of our men in companie, and they weaponlesse, they would abuse them in snatching their yron from them, and not to suffer them to driue the cattell away they payd for. The Generall seeing how they vsed him, thought by policie to goe beyond them; and this it was: Hee himselfe with 120 men in his companie; would goe by night and lye in ambush in a wood nere the place where our men did barter with them, and when it was faire day, the purueyer and his crewe, should come as other times, and bargain with them for so many as they would sell; And when they had sufficient to make a signe, and then the Generall and his companie should come out of their lodgings, and driue them away. This matter was put in practise this night, and the Generall three houres before day departed from the tents, and had imbosked himselfe and all his followers to their owne contents, onely three fellowes of captaine Stiles his companie, to tast of a bottell of wine they caried for their captaine, and in the meane while they were drinking, they had lost sight of their Generall and all his company and took a contrary way, neuer staying til they came to the houses of the Negroes: they seeing three men armed to come to their houses, began to suspect some false measures; these fellowes seeing they had mistaken themselves, retired.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

retired backe to the woods, and in sight of the Indians hid themselves in the bushes, at that time the Sunne being vp halfe an houre after these fellowes had hid themselves, came our weaponlesse Merchants from the tents and beganne to barter with them, for two or three sheepe, which of purpose they had sent downe to our people, to keepe them busie while they were getting their heards of Cattell to runne away. Which our merchants perceiuing, they presently vnarmed as they were, went amongst them, and sent worde by one of them to the Generall, to come away with all his people; for that he and all his companie were discovered, so that the Generall was enforced to breake out of his ambushmēt to rescue his men, which were amongst them without weapons: but before he could come to their rescue, they had wounded one of our men, with foure dartes sticking in his body; which being downe done, they betooke them to their heeles and all the cattel before them, as fast as they could driue to the mountaines. Our men, as then, hauing the raines in their owne handes, pursued after them in such scattering maner, that if the people of the countrey had been men of any resolution, they might haue cut off most of them. The Generall caused a trumpet to sound a retreat, but could not cause them to leaue their chase. And whilest that he was taking order to send the hurt man to the tents, he was halfe a mile from the neere of our men, and not past fīue men in his company: so hee and those men in his company were faine to runne to ouertake some of them which were before, that in the end they were a dozen in his company. Yet the Generall tooke it grieuous, to see his men scatterred ouer all the Playne, & scarce three of them together in a company: which if the people of the countrey had ioyned together, and set vpon them beeing so scatterred, they had cut most of them off, which thing the Generall greatly doubted, yet God be thanked it sorted better. For some of our men ouer-tooke some of the Negroes at the foote of the mountaine, and draue them away from some of their Cattle, and made a stand by them till more of their company came vp, and so returned homwardes with a hundred Kyne and Calues, which was welcome to our sicke men.

But in our absence from our Tentes, Captaine Colskurst, with the Master, and such as were left, being very doubtfull all was not well with vs, thought it best to send our Pinnesse to the bottome of the Baye, to helpe vs if we stood in need: but master Cole, being ouer-bold in his pinnesse to goe a shore, both hee and the boat were cast away, and two more that presumed of their swimming were drowned, the rest escaped very hardly, came running naked along the sands to vs wardes, and there certyified the Generall of all that happened, which was but sorrowfull newes to him. The next day, the Generall sent sufficient store of men to march by land, to the place where the boat was cast away, and found her dry vpon the strand, split and full of sand: but with much trouble she was freed, and sent aboard. Also we found master Cole vpon the strand, and brought him to our Tentes, and buried him.

This night, and the next after, our sentenels had spied spied the cuntry people lurking about our rents, so that alarome was giuen, and they fled: vpon the 14. of August we departed all a board our ships, where we rided till the 19. the wind not seruing to carry vs out, which then serued our turnes, we put to Sea and stood to the Westwards, and the 25. day we dubled the cape of Good hope; with very fauourable windes till the fifth of September; and after that time we met with the wind scarce, and now and then calmes, and here began the scuruy to grow amongst our men, and euery day did the disease encrease. Here might some what be said of the ignorance and vncharitableness of him that was shipt for our phisition, as a caueat to them that shall go hereafter to be better provided: but for 2. respects I forbear, the one in regard of his other calling but chiefly for that he is since dead in the voyage; where for my part I wish his faults may be buried with him.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 19. of December, we had sight of Ingana an Iland lying neere Sumatra, the 20. we had sight of Sumatra, the 21. we ankerd within the Ilands where we were put to great trouble to haue vp our yarden, and get vp our ankors, our men were exceeding weak, we were faine to send men out of our ship to helpe the rest, and so with much a doe we came to Bantam rode. The occasion why we first ankered was because the Assention shot off a peece of ordnance within night, which was contrarie to our articles, we doubting she was in some great distresse came suddenly to an anker to tarie to know what was the matter, which prooued to be nothing but that there Gunner was dead and throwne ouer board, and had that peece for a farewell: which folly of theirs, put vs to great trouble, causing vs to an-

.. 190
Cape of

Sere
Sumatra

The last East-Indian Voyage.

ker in the Sea, in 25. fadomes: then windes all westerlye, which brought in a great seagate, that the next day morning, we had much a doe to get vp our anker, and as for the other ships they were not able to wey without our helpes, which we sent them, and so with very much trouble, we got vs all vnder sayle, fleering away East and by North, and East North East, till wee came to anker between the lland and the maine at the entrance of Bantam bay, in 7. fadomes sandy ground. This night at 7. a clock came a Hollands boat a board vs from Bantam, sent by a Generall of 12. ships, which came there two dayes before vs; in which boat came the vise admeral of the fleet, with refreshing frō shore presenting it to our Generall, with offer of any kindnes they could doe vs, which afterwards they effected towards vs, in sending their boats to fetch vs water: many other curtisyes besides, we of our selues not able to doethe same, our weaknes being so great. This fleet had passed, along the coast, from Molimbique to Selon, and had taken diuers ships, and burned a carrick, and afterwards came hither withall their men in good health. An howre after their comming a board of the hollanders came a prawe or a canow from Bantam, with master Scot & others of our men left their the last voyage by whome the Generall knew the estate of their busines, the 23. at 2. a clock we came to anker in Bantam rode, and saluted the towne and Hollanders with most of our ordinance, and were answered again with the like from all the Hollanders, the 24. day our vise-admerall was sent vnto the king, to excuse the Generals not comming a land, for that he was not well. This day being the 24. came in 2 saile of hollandes fleet

a ship

The last East-Indian Voyage.

a shippe and a pinnes the same day one of the theeus that had set our house on fire was stopped to death. According to the order of the countrey. The 26 day the General gave new articles to all the ships, wherein every man was absolutely forbidden to buy any spice, and diuers other articles for the good demenor of his men which here I omit to write: The 27. 28. & the 29 nothing happened worth writing. The 30. day the Generall of the Hollanders and most part of the principall of his fleet dinied a board with our Generall. The 31. our Generall went on land, with a letter from our Kings Maiestie, and a present to the King of Bantam: which he deliuered him, and were very acceptably receiued. The King but 13. yeares of age and gouerned by a protector, the 3. day we had order to rümage our hould to take prouition of water and marchants goods, for that we were appoynted, & the Affenssion to go for the molucas, & the other ships to take in their lading of peper, and to go home likewise this day we rooke in diuers fardells of Marchandize, and so continued taking in water and Marchandize till the 8. day, and then our Generall came a board, and appoynted such men as should go a long with him to the molucas amongst which number, master Tauerner was remoued, from the Susan to the Affenssion, we continued buslie in taking in of Marchandize, and vittelles of the Hector and the Susan till the 15. day we made an end, of taking in of Marchandize. This day our pursler William Griffen, and master Foster dyed both of the fluxe.

The sixteenth day our Generall, departed from Bantam: and came a bord to proceed on his voyage to the Molucas.

A 56 but 20 20 fings

Jan 11

*20 Harbor
any 20*

20 = 20 20 on 20

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Mollos; this night dyed Henry Dewbrey of the Flix also the same day, maister Surffleet was appointed to goe home in the Hector, to the great contenting of all in our ship: likewise one of our maisters mates, maister Smith, was appointed for Maisters Mate in the Hector. The 17. day dyed of the Flix, William Lewed, John Tenkens, and Samuel Porter the 18. day the Generall hauing dispatched his letters, went aboard the Hector and the Susan, and tooke leaue of them: and after dinner wayed, and stood to the sea-ward till night, and then ankred in 8. fadomes of water: the 19. in the morning we weyed againe, and proceeded with a faire wind till 6. a clocke at night, & then came to anker in 14. fadome of ye grounde faire by a small land, the 20. by breake of day we weyed & steering along the land with a faire winde: this day dyed Henry Stiles our M. Carpenter, and James Varnam, and Iohn Ibersen, all of the Flix. The 21. and 22. dayes we held on our course, with blustering rainie weather; the 22. day dyed of the Flix James Hope: the 24. day in the morning wee fell with the shouldees which lye off the East, North east part of Iaua: this day dyed Iohn Leay, and Robert Whithers of the Flix. Iannarie the 25. wee held on our course, with very much winde and raine, at night one of our men leaped ouer-board, hauing the Callensure. and three more dyed of the Flix, their names were William Bellidine, William Pooter, Gedyon Maisten, and Robert Vernes: the 26. day steering our course with a faire wind suspecting no danger, vpon a sodaine wee saw the ground vnder the ship, heauing ouer the lead, wee had but 4. fadoms water: this night dyed of the Flix George Iohnes, and Frances Buck-man, and Gilbert
Mefton

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Mesterfon: the 27. day in the morning wee stered a way East and by South, wee came into should water which lyeth to the south-ward of Ruinata: so that we were faine to stand South and by West and South to get cleare of the shouldes till noone, and then wee came into deepe water, and so bearing vp we stered East and by South, and by & by we were in five fadomes so that we stood to the south-ward some three leagues, and then held on our former course: this day dyed of the Flixe, Robert Smith, and Thomas Dawson: the 28. day we fell with Selebis, being high land, and at 4. a clocke in the euening we came to an anchor in 26. fadomes: sandy ground, foure leagues from land: the 29. in the morning we weyed, steering East along the land, and the Generall went in our pinnesle alongst the land to seek for fresh water, for that he greatly doubted it was the Bansam water that killed our men, but hee lost his labour, and returned without any, for there was none to be found: at night we ankered in 30. fadomes water, this morning dyed William Pares of the flixe: the 30. day we passed the straites of Selibus and shaped our course for the Iles of Beson: the 31. in the morning we were faire by the land of Betton, and all the night lay by the Lee. The first of Februarie we held on our course with a faire winde, the second dyed of the flixe Henry Lambert: the third day dyed of the flixe Edward Smith,: the 4. in the morning we had sight of Blewe, and Barrow, being two llands: this day dyed Henry James, the fifth day Richard Miller dyed of the Flixe: the sixth day we were faire by the land Blewe, and our Generall went in the pinnesle to seeke for fresh water, and went with the people of the Countrey, and they brought

D

The last East-Indian Voyage.

brought him to a fine sandy Bay, where there was very good water, and there they tooke in three Baricoes and brought aboard, and would spend no longer time there because it was towards night, and Amboyna so neere at hand: the seventh day wee had sight of Amboyna, and of a ship which played off and on the land, but would not come and speake with vs: this after-noon we were saire by Amboyna, and the winde very variable but it fell calme, so that wee could not get in: the eight day at ten a clocke came vp a gale of winde, which brought vs to Amboyna shoare, where we coasted with our ship very nere, but could not haue any ground to anker in, for that all the Ilands haue very deepe water hard aboard the shoare: wee came to a Bay, where we found sixtie fadomes water, and there we ankered, and the Indians brought vs some fruits to sell: this after-noon we sawe two Hollanders pinnisles vnder the shoare of Verranula, which came out from vnder the land to showe themselues to vs, but did returne backe.

The people of Verranula be great enemies to the Portugals, and had sent to Bantam to the Hollanders, desiring their ayde to expell the Portugals out of these Ilands, which if they performed, they would become subiect to them, and sell none of their Cloues, to any other Nation but them. This I knew to bee true, for that the parties who were sent to Bantam, I haue often spoken withall: this day dyed of the Flixe our Master his mate Thomas Michell. The ninth day wee watered, but could nor come to the speech of any of the countrey people: this after-noon dyed Thomas El-
dred of the Flixe.

The last East-Indian Voyeage.

The tenth day wee weyed anker, and stood to the Easter end of Amboyna, and came to an anker in an hundred fadomes water, sayre by the shoare, sayre by a towne called Mamalla. Before we came to an anker, there came an Indian aboard of vs which spake good Portugese, also there came a letter to our Generall from the Captaine of Amboyna, but it was directed to the Generall of the Hollanders, or any other Captaine of his flecte, supposing vs to be Hollanders. The effect of his Letter was, to desire them to certifie them of some newes of Parisingale, and to send an answer by any of his people of his letter, who should bee verie welcome, and should both safely come and goe. The Generall went this day a land, and deliuered a present to one they called their King and other great men, and did desire to know whether wee might haue trade or no: they made answer, that they could not trade with vs without licence of the Fort: this night dyed of the flixe Marke Taylor. The 11 day our Generall sent a letter by Iohn Rogers to the captaine of the Fort, and diuers of the principall of the towne of Mamalla accompanied him thether to haue licence to trade with vs, which they had granted them by the captaine: the effect of our Generals letter, was to certifie him of the death of our Queen, & peace between England and Spaine, with other newes of Christendome, & for better confirmatiō of truth, he sent the captain of the fort, our kings Maiesty & the princes pictures, with diuers of his Maiesties new coine, & in conclusiō as there was peace with our Princes and their subiects in Christendome: he desired that the like might be between vs, for that our cōming was to seeke trade with them and the Amboyrians which he hoped he would not deny him. The party which caried our Generals letter, was very kindly entertained by the Captaine and Souldiers, but that night permitted not him to come within the fort: but lay in a good lodging without the walles, where he was visited by the principall of them. This euening 5. sayles of Hollanders were entered into the mouth of the harbor and turning vp for the fort. The 12. the forenamed Hollanders came to an anker within musket shot of the fort, the Portugals not offering to shoote at them, this afternoone John Rogers returned with an answer of the letter and their came in his company a Portugall Souldier, which brought a warrant from the Captaine to the Gouernor of Manillia, to trade with vs, and like wise to giue John Rogers for his pains a Bahar of cloues, which was presently deliuered him, before the coming away of John Rogers the Portugals with a flagge of truce went a board the dutch Admerall to knowe wherefore they came thither: if in friendshippe they should be welcome: if otherwaies to giue them a direct answer, the datch Generall made answer that his coming thither was to haue that Castell from them, and willed them, to deliuer him the keyes and they should be kindly dealt withall. Which if they refused to do, he willed them to prouide for themselves to defend it, for that he was minded to haue it before he departed, and that his staying was but for the rest of his fleet, which as then were in sight. Therefore willed them by faire meanes to yeald, the Portugals made answer the Castell was their Kings, and of sufficient strength, and therefore willed them to depart thence.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

And

The last East-Indian Voya<sup>g</sup>e.

And as he came as a messenger in way of truce they desired they might haue free libertie to depart, which was granted the with an answer in writing to the Captaine, willing him to surrender vp this fort vnto him in the prince of Orringe his name, by 2. a clock that day, or looke for the extremity of warre, what after passed betwixt the I know not. The answer of our Generals letter from the Captaine of the fort was, that he and all the Portugals in the place were exceeding glad of the good news we brought them of that long and wished for peace, betweene our nations and that there was not any thing in their power ; In that Iland wherein they might pleasure vs, but we should commaund it. And as touching the cloues of Manillia, he had sent speciall order to the Gouvernor, to make sale of all they might make, at a resonable price, and likewise he had good store of cloues in his castell, which should be all ours if playsted the Generall to come with what speed he could thither, whereby he hoped to come to some good composition with the Hollanders. This day dyed of the fluxe Daniell Aske. The 13. we wayed our ankers to come ride nearer the shore of Manillia ; but our Generall made the Portingall souldier beleue he wayed to go to the fort which was no part of his meaning, for that there was not any hope of good to be done for vs, the Hollanders being there before vs, but before we came to an anker, we had ordinance goe of, so that we made account the fight was begun between them, for that the Portingall souldier told our Generall, they would neuer yeild vp their fort, but fight it out to the last man, with many other braggs of their strength and resolution, which afterwards pro-

The last East-Indian Voyage.

ued to be nothing but words. This day our Generall went a land with some Marchandize to barter with them, but nothing was donne that day but put off till the next day.

The fourteenth our Marchants went a shore with commodites, and the chiefe of the towne came and prised our wares: which they liked very well; But offered very little for them, and for such cloues as they had, they would not sell vnder 100. ryalls of 8, the bahar which made shoe they had no will to deale with vs: The Portingall souldier went a land, with our Generall with a letter to his Captaine and foure yards of Greene cloth giuen him for a reward, but when they came to talke with the people to know what newes at the fort, some sayd it was taken, others said they were in fight, but in these doubts their came a messenger from the fort, which brought vs certaine newes, it was yealded to the Hollanders by composition, but vpon what conditions I knew not. The Portingall souldier hearing this certaine newes durst not returne, for fear the people would cut his throt by the way, but desired the Generall he might tarry with him, which he granted; and after the Gouvernor of the towne, had hard that the Hollanders had the castle, He then tould our Generall he would sell vs no cloues without licence of the Hollanders, so that all hope of trade in this place was gone. The fifteenth day we tooke in water, and made particiõ of the marchandize, to the Assention for shce had taken none in at Bantam, but all was put in to our ship by reason they were so exceeding weak, they were not able to stoe them.

Here our Generall was almost in despaire for the attayning

The last East-Indian Voyage.

rayning of his laying, and especially for Cloues, Nutmegs, and Mace; we hard they had good store at Banda, but the Hollanders were there before vs with great store of such commodities as we had, which they had taken in a ship bound to the Molucos, laden with the same commodities, yet there was hope of the Banda commodities which is Nuts and Mace, by reason of the great quantie we hard say they had: likewise this day the Generall called a counsell of the Captains, Maisters, and Marchants, and there told them, that their was no way left vs to attaine to our lading, but to part company. And the Assention to goe for the Iles of Banda to seeke her lading of Nutmegs and Mace, and that he was minded with the Dragon to goe to the Molucas, or else at leastwile to doe his best to get thither.

This speech of his was disliked of all: for that in both our Shippes at that present were not so many seruiceable men as would sayle the Assention, and therefore we should hazard both the ships to part company hauing so weake a company, and likewise to attempt the Voyage to the Mollucas, it was against reason, for that he had both the wind and corrant against vs, and to plye it to winde-ward with so weake a company, it would be lost labour. This was the opinion of all, sauing the General, who stil had a good hope we should attaine it. At this time nothing was concluded, but left to be considered vpon til the next morning. The 16 day very early in the morning before day, M. Groue came to the Generals bed side, telling him he cold take no rest all the night, for thinking of the motion made by him, & our going to the Molucas, although it was a thing neuer attempted by any, yet he saw no other way to put it in practise,

The last East-Indian Voyage.

practise; otherwise we must make account to returne backe to Bantam without lading.

The General was glad to heare him of that minde, and at the coming aboard of Captaine Choulshurst, and his master, it was absolutely determined vpon, to part company, although greatly to the dislike of them both, for they thought neuer to see vs again: our weaknesse in both ships being so exceeding weake: the seuenteenth day wee wayed, and plyed to winde-ward all the day and all the night to get to sea, the way we came in: the eighteenth day we got to sea cleare of Amboyna, and stood to sea till the after-noone, and then wee parted company with the Ascension, bearing vp for Banda afore the winde, not hauing passing a day and a halfe saile. From the eightene to the one and twentie, wee plyed it and got very little to wind-wards; this day it fell calme, and we were caried betweene two Ilandes, they bee called Manipa, and Ambouzeylioe, with a great currant, and lost more in the calme in one night, then we had got in two dayes: the Generall sent his brother to Manipa, to buy freshe vittels, but euery thing was so deare they came without, sauing a couple of Goats the king sent our Generall for a present.

Manipa.
The king of this Ile vsed our men very kindly, and feasted them, being very glad to heare of the health of our Queene: he asked for Sir Francis Drake: this king was at Tarnata, when Sir Francis Drake was there. The two and twentieth day, we ankered vnder Manipa, on the South west side, in 50 fadomes: this day dyed Thomas Harman of the Flix: the three and twentieth, we weyed with very much adoe, for our anker was foule of a rock, we broke one of the flocks there<sup>2</sup> of, before we could way it. The 24. day most part calme, in which calmes we were caried very neer Mamipa shore, all sayles standing and vpon a sudden came a gulf, which had like to haue put vs vpon a ledge of rocks, which we had no way to auoyde, but all sayles standing came to an anker, we ankerd within a quoyts cast of the rocks, and so escaped that danger. The 25. day died Thomas Beynes: the 27. day much raine, the winde westerly.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

March, the first, the windes all Northerly: this day dyed of the Flixe Thomas Wheeler: the second day the winde at the North west for the most part, this day dyed of the flixe, Richard Hedges; and William Flud.

The third day we came faire by an Iland, not specified in our cards, it lieth West South west, from the Southermost Iland of Bachan some foure-teene leagues: this Ile of Bachan, we gaue to name Halbowling, for that in 7. dayes sailing we got not a mile: the fourth and fift dayes we plied all we might, but could doe noe good, and those few sound men wee had were tyred with contiual labour, we eat this present lacking both woode and water, came to an anker vnder Halbowling in sixtie sadomes, this time the Maister and boatone were both very sicke of the flixe, insomuch that the Generall was in great doubt of their recovery: the sixt day very much wind, at North-west, our Generall went a land to seeke for fresh water but could find none, but digging a well in the land wee founde very e good water, as for Woode, we needed not to seeke for; that the

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Island yeelded nothing but wood to the sea-side, that one was scarce able to passe, the trees and brakes were so thicke: here our portingall souldier was verie sicke of the fluxe, and the Generall was verie carefull of him, for that he hoped by his meanes to haue trade with the Portingales of Tydore for Cloues. The 7. 8. and 9. dayes, wee spent in wooding and watering, which wee got all aboard: the ninth day the windes continuing northerly with much raine. This day died of the fluxe William Elmesmore. The 10. day wee weyed, but had much ado to gette vp a small anchor, our weakenesse was so great, that wee could not start it without rackles: this day dyed David Flud. The 11. day raynie weather, the winde at north-west, wee stood to the northeast-ward: this day dyed one of our Marchants called Master George Ware of the fluxe. The 12, 13, and 14 dayes, wee spent in turning to wind-ward, sometimes vpon one racke, sometimes of the other. The 13. day dyed Edward Ambrose of the fluxe. The 15. and 16. dayes, the windes easterly, wee made some 19. leagues north west.

The 17. day wee were in 10. minutes of south latitude, the windes all westerly, and wee ranne some 10. leagues north: this day we had sight of all the Cloue-Islands, that is to say, Makian, Maser, Tidore and Tarnata, all of them picked hilles in forme of a sugar-loafe. The 18. and 19. dayes, wee were faire vnder the land of Makian; Betweene that and Gilolo, where the people of Makian came aboard of vs with fresh victuals, but sould verie deere: they sayd they had good store of Cloues in the Island: but they could not sell vs any without leaue of the King of Tarnata. The 20. and 21.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

we spent plying to winde-wards with little wind, between Makian, & Muter. This Island of Muter is uninhabited, but hath great store of Cloues vpon it, this Island standeth between Tidor & Makian, but neerer to Makian by one third of the way thā it is to Tidore; the people of this Island haue been slaine most part in the wars between Tarnata and Tydore, for sometime it was subiect to one King, and sometime to another. The 22. day, we got vnder the land of Tydore, and bearing vp between a small Island called Pulo Camallie, and Tydor, there came rowing two of their Galleys from Tarnata, making all the speed possible they could toward vs, the headmost of the two weuing with a white flagge vnto vs to strike sayle, and to tarrie for them. At the same time came 7. Tydore Galleys, rowing betwixt vs and the shoare, to chase the Tarnatanes Galleys, wee not knowing their pretence, they in the Tarnase Galleys did all they might to ouertake our Ship weauing with two or three flags at once to tarie for them, which our Generall seeing, caused the top-sayles to be strucke, and lay by the lee to knowe what was the matter; so that the formost of these Galleys or Caracolles recouered our shippe, wherein was the King of Tarnata, and diuers of his Noble-men, and three Dutch Marchants. when they had fast hold of the ship, the Dutch Marchants shewed themselves to vs looking pale, and desired our Generall for Gods sake, to rescue the Caracole that came after vs, wherein were diuers Dutch-men, which were like to fall into the enemies handes, where there was no hope of mercie, but present death: wherevpon our Generall caused our Gunner to shoote at the Tydore Galleys, yet that would not cause them to leaue their chace, but within shot of our ordinance discharged all their shot at the Tarnata Galley, and presently boarded them, and put all to the sword sauing three men, which saued their liues by swimming, and were taken vp by our men in our boate, there were no Dutch-men in her as they reported, but all Tarnatanes: if wee had not rarryed as wee did, the King of Tarnata and those with him, had fallen into his enemies hand, where no hope of mercede was to bee expected: the Dutch-marchants comming aboard, told our Generall they thought wee had beene Hollenders, and bound for Tarnata, and that was the cause they had put themselves in such danger, and likewise to know whether wee were bound, our Generall told them that he was going then for Tydore, to seeke trade with the Portugals, with whom we were in amitie: they diswaded the Generall not to attempt any such thing, for there was no other thing to bee expected at their handes but trecherie: the Generall answered hee knew them well enough, but minded to worke so warily with them, that hee doubted not of any harme they could doe him.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The Dutch-men seeing our Generall minded to goe to the Portugall-towne of Tydore, desired him that he would not let the king of Tarnata and them fall into their enemies hand: whom so lately he had deliuered them from, & as for Clowes there was good store to bee had at Tarnata, and Makean, and for their parts they would not bee our hindrance, for that they had neither wares nor money left. So the Generall caused them them to entreat the king to come into the ship, who came in trembling: which the Generall seeing thought hee was a colde, and caused his man to fetch him a blacke damaske gowne, layde with golde lace, and lyned with vnshorne Veluet, which the king put vpon his backe, but neuer had the maners to surrender it againe, but kept it as his owne: the king being in the Generals Cabin desired him to goe with him to Tarnata, where hee minded to haue a factorie, but himselfe and his shippe would make no stay there, but goe to Tydore, to see what vsage hee should finde of the Portugals.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The king did what hee could to perswade him to the contrary but could not preuaile. Heare the Generall deliuered a Letter from the KINGS MAIESTIE OF ENGLAND, with a fayre standing Cuppe, and a couer double gilt, with diuers of the choicest Pinsadoes, which hee kindly accepted of, and presently had the Letter red, and enterperred vnto him where-with hee made shewe to bee greatly contented.

Wee trimmed our Sailes by a winde, and plyed to winde ward for Tarnata: the Kings Carracole not daring to put from the shippe. About soure of the clocke in the after-noone, came the King of Tarnatas eldest sonne aboard in a light Frigat which rowed well: hee greatly doubted the well-fare of his father, and the king stood in doubt of his sonne. At his coming to his father aboard our ship in the Generals cabin, he kissed his fathers right foot, & he kissed his head

d letter
So as you will find in the book

The last East-Indian Voyages.

the Generall had giuen warning to all his company that they should tell no newes of the Hollands fleet, but before night it was tould the King and all the rest, but by whome could neuer be learned. From the twentie two, to the twentie foure, the King and all his crewe taried a bord of vs. the foure and twentieth day, we came by the chiefe towne of Tarnata, and saluted them with seauen peeces of ordinance, the same after noone wee came to an anker in the rode, which is in the Southeest part of the lland in fourteene sadomes sandy grownd: the rode is from the towne two leagues and a halfe. The twentie fife day the king sent for his plate and vittells from the towne, and feasted the Generall in his owne Cabin, there sat none of his nobles with him at table, none sat but his sonne and the Generall: the rest sat vpon the floore of the Cabin crosse legged, like tailors: after dinner the Generall desired him that he would take some order, he might haue a house to establish a factorie, for that he was minded to goe to the Portugals to see what he could do with them: the King perswaded him earnestly not to meddle with them, for he was sure there was nothing but villanie and trecherie with them: The Generall sayd it was a folly to dissuade him from it, and therefore prayed him that he might haue a house according to his promise. The King seeing in what earnestnes the Generall did speake vnto him, sayd hee would presently depart to the town, and cause a house to be prouided in a redinesse for his Marchants. The twentie six before day our Generall was in a redines with such Marchants and Marchandizes as he minded to leaue at Tarnata, went to the towne, and an howre before day came thirther, the King hearing a noyse of trumpets knew that our Generall was come, and sent a small Praue to our pinnes to will our Generall to come vnto him; he was aboard the admirall of the Caracoles, he came into our pinnes and sat some halfe an howre there taking Tabacko, and then came the Sabendor, with light and brought the Generall to his house, and the King to his Caracole. Our Generall presently after his landing caused his men to land all our goods, & carrie the to the house, which was performed before day light: then the Dutch Marchants enuited the Generall and Maister Browne to dine with them, with whome they presently went to the Dutch-house, where they shewed them, what euery sort of commodities were worth in that place, with proffers of any kindnes they could doe him. As for the prices of our wares the Generall had made enquirie of the Gusforates which came aboard, which did agree with the Dutchmen, in rating of euery sort of them, wherby he knewe that they did not dissemble.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Before it was dinner time, there came a Messenger from the King, to will the Dutch Marchants to come and speake with him; and the Generall came home to our house, where hee had not stayed halfe an howre, but one of the Dutch Marchants came for him to come speake with the King; So the Generall taking Maister Browne, and Iohn Addeyes, one that had the language, and my selfe with him, went presently with them that were present, where wee found the King in a large roome sitting in a chaire, and all his chief Counsellars about him sitting vpon mattes on the ground; ground; before him the Dutch-Marchants sitting amonge them; when the Generall came, the King willed him to sit downe, after hee was set, the King caused the Letter brought by our Generall from the kinges Maiestie of England to bee openly read; which being done, the King acknowledged himselfe beholding vnto his Maiestie, for so kinde a Letter and a present, which he would endeouour to requite. And for conformation thereof, he gaue his subiects free leaue to trade with vs for cloues, and likewise as one wishing vs all the good he could, hee desired our Generall for his owne good, that he would not haue any thing to doe with his enemies, (the King of Tidore and the Portugalles,) with whome he should finde nothing but treason and trecherie.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The Generall by his interpretor gaue him great thanks for his kindnes, in giuing so free liberty to trade with his people, and likewise for his good counsell to shun the trecherie of the Portugalls, but for his part hee doubted no trecherie at all should harme him, for that he did mind to stand vpon such a gard as all the strength they had should not offend him, and therefore desired his highnes to pardon him hee did not follow his counsell, for that hee purposed withall speede to goe thither and to offer them peaceable trades, which if they refused, hee had the thing he desired, then had he iust cause to bee at warres with them, and if they would not accept of peaceable trade, hee minded to ioyne with the Hollanders against them, when GOD should send them thither.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

This spech of the Generall, contented the King and all there present so that they had no more to say, but intreat him, that he did not furnish them with any of our great ordinance, and to take great care of their trechery : and so the counsell broke vp, The Generall taking his leaue of the King and all his nobles, for presently after dinner, he minded to depart aboard: also the King promised, if the Portingales would not trade with vs, he would write his letter to the gouernor of Makeau to deale with vs, for all the cloues in that Ile. And, so the Generall and Maister Browne went to the Duch house to dinner: which being done he came home with the Duch marchants in his company. And so, taking leaue of them and of vs, departed aboard.

The 27. day in the morning came aboard 2. men, sent by the King of Tarnat, with a letter to the gouernor of Makeau, to trade with vs. They were sent by the King to go along with vs thither, for our better vsage. So about 8. a cloke in the morning we weighed, & plyed it all day for the roade of Tidore: and about sunne setting we came to an anchor, in 32. fadomes sandy ground, on the westerne side of the Ile faire of, by the shore. Coming to an anchor there came a Caricole with two swift Cãoas to take vewe of our ship. Our General Commanded one to weasse them with a white flag: and presently, one of the small Praves came faire by vs, demanding whence we were. Our Generall caused our Portingall soldiar, to will them to come aboard, for we were English men and their friends. And so there came aboard vs three Portingales, which entred in to the gallery, and went into the Generalls cabin : where the Generall told them, his comming thither, was to seeke trade with them as friends, for that the wars betweene our nations was done, and a peace cōcluded, The Queene of England being dead, and the King of Scots, King of England. They made answer, that they knew that the Queene was dead, by way of the Phillippines, and to heare of the long desired peace they were very glad, and for trade with vs they said they could say nothing, till that they had made the Captaine acquainted therewith: and because it was night, they were desirous to be gone, promising the next day morning to returne. So the Generall let them depart, and our Portingall souldier with them, with a letter to the Captaine of the fort, wherein he did certifie him of the newes of Christiandome, and the cause of our comming thither, and so they departed.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

*mine of 2
a 12
along*
The 28. day about 6. a clocke, we weighed, hauing very little wind, & at 8. a clocke came a Carricole, & 2. Prawes frō the Portingalls towne, and in them five Portingalls, and our aboue named souldier: the Generall stood in the wast, and entertained them: our souldier telling the Generall, the principal of them was called Thome Detoris Captaine of a Galcon, and the rest married men of the towne. Captaine Detoris deliuered our Generall a letter from the captaine of the Fort: the effect was, that he was welcome with all his company, to him and all the rest of the Portingalls inhabiting in that place, and whereas the King of Tarnata and the Hollanders their enemies, had giuen bad reports of them, saying there was nothing but villanie and treason to be had at their hands, hee hoped our Generall did conceiue better of them, and that their reports

The last East-Indian Voyage.

reports were of malice and not of truth, and no credit to be given to the report of their enemies. But experience should proue them lyars, and themselves no such bad minded people: and therefore he willed the Generall to haue no doubt of good vsage at their hands, and for trade which he desired with them, hee would resolue him thereof the next day: for as yet they had not called a councell concerning that matter, without which councell, he could not doe it, but willed him to haue no doubt thereof. So the generall tooke them downe to his Cabin to breakfast, and the Carricole and the botes towed the ship to the townwards, being very little wind. About eleuenth a clock we came to an anchor, a little to the northwards of the Fort, and saluted the fort and towne, with 7. peeces of Ordinance: and from the fort answered with 3. peeces, and presently vpon the same, in a boat came the Captaine of the fort, called Petro Alleneris Debbroo, and the Captain of the other Galeon called Ferdinando Perra de Sandy: these Galeons that these Captaines did belong to, did ride within a league of rockes very neere the shoare, with their broad sides to seaward, with Ordinance placed therein to shoote at their enemies, which come rowing by the sundry times. The Generall brought the Captaine of the Fort, and the other Captaine downe with the rest to breakfast, the Captaine of the Fort making great hast to be gone. After many cōplements passed betweene our General and them, they tooke their leaue and departed, promising the next day to come looke vpon our commodities, and to agree vpon price for them. About 3. a clocke our Generall sent his brother a shore with presents to the 3. Captaines, which they very kindly accepted: The Captaine of the Fort returning the Generall a fat beefe.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 29. day came Captaine Torris and other Portingalls aboard, and the Generall caused our Marchants to bring a note of all such commodities as were in our ship, into his Cabin: where he shewed every sort vnto them, setting a price vpon them. Captaine Torris and the rest of the Portingalls, said they were too deare at such rates, saying & protesting they sold better cheape such like commodities one to the other, and therefore desired the Generall to bee more reasonable, and then he should haue all the Cloues in the Iland. The Generall with-drew himselfe apart, and in writing set downe his lowest prices, how hee would sell, willing them to go a land and consider of it, & returne with an answer (if they could) that night: so they tooke their leaue and went a shore.

The 30. day Captaine Torris came aboard, and would haue abatement of each sort of commodities: which the General would not yeeld vnto, telling him, if he would not giue such prices, he wold be gone for Makeaw: and vpon the same presented the two Tarnataes which the King sent to him for the same purpose. So he seeing nothing would be abated of that price, agreed with the General, & appointed his own dwelling house for our factory, with many kinde proffers, which he faithfully performed.

31. o. after
The 31. being Easter day, Captaine Torris with diuers of the principall men of the towne, dined aboard with our Generall.

Aprill the 1. in the morning the Generall sent his brother

The last East-Indian Voyage.

ther & M. Woodnoth with marchandise a land to Captain Torris house, & within an houre after, the Generall went a land himself, where he was visited by the king, the Captaine of the fort, and all the principall men of the towne, who intertained him most kindly. They stayed some small time with him, and departed all of them. They being gone, the Generall beganne to set his Marchants a worke, to buy Cloues of the Portin- galls: & hauing set them in a ready way how to deale
with them, he went with Captaine Torris to dinner, where there was no lacke of good cheere. After dinner came the high priest, to welcome our Generall, willing him to haue no doubt of any bad dealing in that place: vpon his soule hee would vndertake, that there were not any in the towne that wished him or any of his company any harme: with many other complements, and so departed. Captaine Torris made offer to the Generall, to be his chiefe Factor, and to helpe his brother and M. Woodnoth in their busines, each hauing more to doe then they could well turne them to:
and to say the trueth, he was so carefull in their busines, as if it had bin his own. This day died of the fluxe,
M. Mitten our cooke, and of the fluxe Thomas Halls.
The Tydoryans came not aboard to sell vs any thing:
the Generall doubted it was long of the Portingals,
who had put them in some needlesse feare.

The 6. day the Generall sent his brother to the king of Tydore with a present, and to diuers of his principal men, desiring his highnesse, he would giue his subiects leau to repaire aboard with cloues, and fresh victualls, and that there was no cause of feare why they should abstaine from so doing. The King said, they should have leaue to bring vs refreshing a board : But for the cloues his people had, should bee brought to the English-house, otherwise the quantity wee should buy, would not be knowne, whereby the King of Portingall might loose his custome, and presently vppon the same, the King made a Proclamation, willing all his people to repaire to the English factory, with such Cloues as they had. The Captaine of the Fort, proclaiming the like in his towne, there came a flying report, the Hollanders were in sight, and vpon the same the King sent out a Caricole to sea, but saw no shipping.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 9. day the Generall sent his brother a shore againe vnto the King, with a present to desire his highnesse to giue his subjects leaue to repaire aboard with their Cloues, for that the Portingalls would not permit them to repaire to his house, but would be serued themselves with the best wares, and let his people haue but their leauings. Whereupon the King promised they should come aboard : which they afterwards did.

The 12. day came newes the Hollanders were in sight, and out went the bloudy colours, at the Fort. The 14. day being Sunday Captaine Torris the Kings factor, and diuers other of the principal of the Portingals, dined with the General. This day the Captain of the Fort, sent our Generall word, that the Hollanders were off, and on Bachan, willing the Generall to cause his factors to get in his debts that were owing before their comming.

The 15. day the Generall sent his brother a shore, to gather in such debts as were owing, and likewise to buy Cloues, if any came to the house to bee sold: which he performed, buying some small quantity, for that most in the Iland were in our hands, without it were some 80. Bahars which the Kings Factor had, which he could not sell, because they did belong vnto the Marchants of Malacca. The capitaine of the fort gaue commandement to al men, to make present payment, which they honestly performed. The Generall sent to Capitaine Torris, to know the cause: hee sent him word, we had bought all they had, without it were, those which were in the factors hands, which could not be sold.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 19. day we prepared for our departure from hence, to go to Makeau. The 20. day came a Portingall a board with a letter to our Generall, from the Capitaine of the fort, the effect thereof I could not learne. The King of Tarnata two men, which all this time of our being in this place had tarried aboard, were very earnest with the Generall for their departure to the Ile of Makeau, where they made no doubt but to lade our ship with cloues. They began to be merry to see vs in such readinesse to bee gone, for they liued in no small feare of some treason, to be attempted against vs by the Portingals and Tydorians, in so much that all the time of our being here, they were the best watchmen in our ship. The Generall sent his brother to the King, desiring his highnesse, he would write his letter to the Gouverneur of Taffasoa, to sell him such cloues as they had there, which he presently did. This towne of Taffasoa is vpon Makeau and holds for the King of Tydore. all the rest of the Iland is the Kings of Tarnata.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 21. day being Sunday, came the same Portingall that brought our Generall the letter the day before, with commendations from his Captaine to the Generall, & to certifie him the Hollanders ships were in sight. The Portingall taking his leaue, about eleuen a clocke wee weighed with a smal fauourable gale of winde, to go for Makeau. As we passed by the Fort, we saluted the with 5. peeces, they answering vs with 3. Likewise comming thwart the Kings towne, we gaue them 5. peeces, and were answered with 6. from the Galeons. At this present we had sight of the Hollanders. Capten Torris our Generals great friend, comming a board presered him with hens, which be both scarce and deare, and so tooke his leaue: we keping on our course with little winde, for Makeau, passing bettwene Mottera & Poulacaualya, the Holliders seeing vs come vpon them, were in good hope we had beene a Portingall that for feare was flying away. Night being at hand, they spread themselves, that we could not passe them, but one or other must needes see vs. About midnight, we came amongst the, sounding our trompetes, whereby they did know we were not Portingales. The Admirall sent his shiper in his pinnasse aboard, to know what newes: which was certified them at full. He departing, they saluted vs with 3. peeces of ordinance: we answered them with the like. They told our Generall, that they had taken Amboyna castell, and left a garrison therein.

The 22. day we came to an anchor about seuen a clocke at night, a little to the eastwards of the chiefe towne of Makeau: the towne is called Mofficia, in which towne the Viceroy for the King of Tarrata is resident resident, this after noone, came a carycole aboard before we came to an anchor, and told our General, they would go about the Ile, and to all the townes, to giue them warning to repaire to our shippe with their cloues before night. They had compassed the Island, and came aboard vs againe.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 23. day, the Generall sent his brother with the two Tarnataes, and the Kings letters, and a present to the Gouvernor. The present hee receiued, and caused the letter to be publikely read: but for the cloues of that Island, he said they were not ripe, but those fewe that were to be had, the Generall should haue them the next day. This day died of the flixe, our Baker Griffith Powell.

The 24. day the Generall went ashore himselfe, to the Gouvernor, to know why the people came not with cloues according to promise. He made answer, he thought there were not any ripe in the Island, but he had sent to all the townes, to warne them to bring in cloues: which they would not faile on the morrow. The Generall seeing their delayes, began to suspect, the King of Tarnataes letter was to command them to sell vs none: therefore, if they came not the next day, he would go to Taffafoa. Much quarrell and war is betweene those of this place, and they of the Island: and if there bee any taken of either part, the most fauour they shew them, is to cut off their heads.

The 25. day came most of the chiefe men of the Island aboard to our Generall, and told him they had small store of ripe cloues in the Island, which they were willing he should haue. But they were sent for, by the King of Tarnata, to repaire with their forces, to assist him in his warres, against the King of Tydore, & the Portingalls: and therefore desired him not to bee offended with them, for that that they could not sell him cloues till the wars were done. This day they of Taffasoa had taken ten men of this towne, and cut off their heads.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 26. we weighed, with very little wind, and plied it for Taffasoa, which standeth on the west-north-west part of the Iland.

The 27. day the Generall sent his brother in his pinnasse to the towne of Taffasoa with the king of *Tydore*s letter, which he deliuered. The gouernor hauing read it, made answer, that all the cloues they could make, the General should haue: for that the King had sent him word in an other letter, which hee receiued the day before, that he should cause all in the towne to be sold him. The Portingalls haue a small Block-house with 3. peeces of Ordinance in this towne, wherein were five Portingalls: they had some cloues which they promised the Generall should haue. The pinnasse returned, and brought one of the Portingalls aboard, the ship lying becalmed all the time of their absence.

The 28. day, about 10. a clocke in the morning, we came to an anchor, right before the towne of Taffasoa in 70. sadome water, hard by the shore.

The 29. day the Generall went a land to the Gouvernor, who offered himself, & towne, to be at his disposition: saying his King comanded him so to do. The Generall demanded, whether the people would bring their cloues aboard: he made answer, they had small store of boats, and could not therefore so conuenient-

The last East-Indian Voyage.

ly come aboard. So the Generall told him, he would set vp a tent vpon the strand, right against the ship: if he would cause his people to bring them thither, hee liked well thereof: and came downe with the General to choose out a conuenient place, and so tooke his leaue, promising, so soone as the Generall sent aboard to will them to make prouision to set vp a tent: which in two houres after was done.

The 30. day was an alarum in the towne, their enemies hauing taken a man without the walls, & cut off his head. The King of Tydore hath souldiers there, which keepe good watch and ward, the towne standing vpon a point of a land, close by the sea, and is compassed with a wall. The King of Tarnata hath twise attempted with all his force to take it, but could do no good. They liue in such feare, they dare not at any time go a flight-shot out off their walles, without a gard of souldiers. They haue often truce, but they breake it vpon slight occasions. A little before night the Gouvernor came to our Generall, and told him, there were no more cloues to be had, and therefore he presently caused the tent to be pulled downe, and sent all things aboard.

The second day in the morning our General receiued a letter from the Captaine of the fort, wherein he certified him, of the burning of the two Galeons by the Hollanders, and intreated him to make speed thither to see the fight, which he dayly expected: and to bring those five Portingalls with him, which were at Taffasoa: willing the Generall, that he should come to an anchor before the Kings towne, where hee should haue all the cloues they had.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 3. day in the afternoone, we came before the Kings towne, where we found all the Hollanders riding, and let fall an anchor amongst them, in a 100. fadomes, sayre by the shore. The King of Tarnata was likewise there, with all his Carricoles. After the mooring of our ship, the Generall sent M. Grane our Maister to the Dutch admirall, who found but cold intertainment: the Dutch affirming, we had assisted the Portingalls in the last fight, whereby they had received great hurt, & that they were told so by a Gofforat. The Maister denied it, and said, the Gofforat lyed like a dogge: saying, if the Generall had done so, hee would not denye it, for any feare of them, but iustifie it to their faces, either here or any where else. These hot speeches being overpassed, they grew into milder termes, and then they began to tell our Maister the manner of their fight with the Galeons, and the burning of them, with the losse of some of their men in the same fight: and they minded the next day to fall downe to the Fort, and lay battery to it: which they had done before, if the King of Tarnata had not withhold them, in perswading them to tarry for more helpe, which he expected from the other Islands. So the Maister having learned what news he could, came aboard, and told the Generall, what speeches had passed. An houre after the Maisters comming aboard, there came a prau from the Kings towne, with a letter to our Generall from Captaine Torris, wherein there was nothing but commendations, and that hee would come aboard, when it was darke, and see him. The General willed him to come, either night or day, he should be welcome. This evening the King of

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Tarnata rowed ouer for Battachina, with all his Carricoles: & Captain Torris came aboard to see our General, tarrying some two houres, telling the Generall, they desired to fight with the Hollanders, not doubting of victory: and for such cloues as they had, they should be brought to the Kings towne, and so conueied aboard vs. So growing very late, he tooke his leauē and departed ashore.

The 5. day, the Hollanders expected the comming of the King of Tarnata, but he came nor.

The 6. day, our Generall sent sent his brother and
M. Woodnoth to the King of Tydore, to know if he wold sell them any cloues. He made answer, at that time all his people were busie in fortifying the towne, so that he could not spare them from their worke, but bid
the Generall assure himselfe of all the cloues that hee and the Portingals had. This night came one of our men in a small Carrycole, from Tarnata, and told our Generall, that they were hardly vsed by the King of Tarnata, in not suffering them to buy and sell with his people, according to promise, and had taken their weight from them, giuing commandement that no man should sell them any cloues. Likewise he said, that they could get no victualls for their money, because of the warres, and that all our men were very sicke, saue M. Browne. The king by his Carricole, sent the Hollanders word, he would be with them in the morning.

The 7. day in the morning came the King of Tarnata, with all his forces, and he himselfe went aboard
the Hollands admirall, where most part of the fore-noone was spent in counsell, and about one of the

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Canlers
not did
for portation

clocke the ships weighed, and came vnder their foretopsailes faire by the Fort, and let flye all their Ordinance, the Fort shooting now and then a peece at them. They came to an anchor a little to the Northwardes of the Fort, where they spent the most part of that afternoone in shooting at it, but harmed them not at all. The Portingalls could not harme the shippes as they rid, hauing but one peece laid out that way.
In the hottest of this battery, the King of Tarnata &
the Hollanders landed some of their forces a little to the northward of the towne: not finding any resistance they intrenched themselues where they landed in the sand, and there continued all the night without molestation. After the Hollanders had done their battery, Captaine Torris came aboard, to see our Generall, where he was very merry and pleasant, saying as alwaies he had, that they nothing doubted of a happy victory, and for such Ordinance as had bin shot at them, it had done them no harme at all, onely
he was sorry that the Ordinance did hinder them for bringing of cloues to him. But he desired the General to haue a little patience, & he should not want cloues to lade his ship: which were nothing but wordes, for it was well knowne to the Generall hee had but 80.
bahars in the towne, which the factor had.

The 8. day, very early in the morning, the shippes beganne to batter the fort. which continued the most part of the morning, in which time those men of the Hollanders, which lodged a land, had brought themselues within Saker shotte of the Fort, and there raised a mount, whereon they placed a great peece of Ordinance, and began their batterie. The Portingals

now

The last East-Indian Voyage.

now and and then shooting a peece to no purpose.

The 9. day, before it was light, the ships beganne their battery, and they likewise from the mounte, and vpon a sodaine the Dutch, and the Tarnataes sallied out off their trenches, with scaling ladders, and had entred vpon the walles, before the Portingalls in the Fort were aware, and had placed their colours vpon their ramparts, which the Portingalls seeing, came with a charge vpon them, with shot and fire-workes, throwing at them which were so mounted, that they cast downe their weapons, and leaped downe far faster then they came vp, leauing their colours and their furniture behind them: the Portingalls still continuing throwing of fire workes amongst them, whereby diuers were hurt and scalded. At such time as the Hollanders gaue the scalado, 30. of the choicest Portingalls with great number of the Tydorians were going in the woodes to giue an assault vpon the backes of them which were lodged, where the peece of Ordinance was mounted: in which time of their absence, the Hollanders entred vpon their walles. If these men had bin in the fort it had gone far worse with the Hollanders. The Portingalls that were abroad, hearing the alarum at the fort, came running backe againe, & some that ran fastest, came to the walls, at such time as they in the Fort had put them to the retreat, where they went to handy blowes with them. Captaine Torris, which had the leading of the 30. men, was shotte with a musket and slaine. By this time the most of the 30. Portingalls were gotten, some within and some vnder the walls: and the Hollanders and Tarnatans throwing away their weapons, beganne to take their heelcs

The last East-Indian Voyage.

heelles to runne into the sea. At this very instant, when the Portingalls and the Tydorians had the victory in their hands, and very ready to charge vpon their flying enimies, the Fort tooke fire, and blew vpon euen with the ground, so that all the Portingalls which were vnder the walles of the fort were there buried, and the most part within the Fort were blowne vp into the ayre: The Captaine being newly gone out to place two souldiers at a little posterne dore, gaue them charge to kill any Portingalls which should go out that way, in which time of his absence, the Fort was blowne vp, whereby his life was saued: but howe, or by what means it tooke fire it could not be known. The Hollanders and Tarnatans seeing the fort blowne vp, began to gather vp their scattered weapons, and made a stand, nor daring to enter the ruines of the Fort, till the Portingalls had left it: which was halfe an houre after. In which time the Portingall and Tydorian slaues had sacked the towne, setting fire on the factory, where the cloues were, which they could not carry with them, leauing nothing of any worth behiind them. When the King of Tarnata saw the victory on his side, he with all the Carnicoles, came rowing towards the Kings towne, in triumph: but durst not come very neere, for that the King of Tydore did shoot at them. And so rowing by our ship, singing and making great mirth, returned to the Fort, where was no resistance, but so long as the Portingalls had it, he durst not come within a mile, Whē the Tarnataes had pillaged the towne, they set all the houses a-fire which were quickly burnt euen with the ground, being all made of canes. After this victory, the King of

Tydore

The last East-Indian Voyage.

Tidore sent his sonne & a Nobleman, to our General, desiring him to be a meanes of peace betwene the Hollanders and him, for now he had what he desired, which was victorie ouer the Portingales. The Generall sent him word, he would do his best, as well for him, as for the Portingalls, which by fortune of warre were fallen into their enimies hands. So presently the Generall caused the Pinnasse to be manned, and he and the Maister went aboard the Dutch Admirall. Whē they came thither, they asked for the Admirall, who was ashore: but they sent for him. At his comming, he bad our Generall welcome, after many speeches passed of their fight, and commendations vnderferued giuen of themselves, they exclaimed vpon the Tarnataes for cowards, and attributed all the glory to themselves, saying they durst not stand by them in the fight, but ran away. After a great deale of vaine glorious commendations of themselves, the Generall was desirous to see what prisoners they had taken of the Portingalls: one was brought forth being one of Captain Pereros souldiers. The Generall bad him declare a trueth in a matter he would aske him: he made answer if he could he would, then he asked him what great ordinance, powder, shot & guns, they had from him to assist thē? He answered, he knew not of any, so turning to the Dutch admiral, he maruailed he should giue credit to such vntruths reported by a slaue. He answered againe, such things were told, but he did not beleue them to be true. So the Generall asked, what he ment to do with the Portingales his prisoners? He said he would hang them. The Generall intreated him to shew them mercy: considering they did nothing

H

The last East-Indian Voyage.

thing but what all good subiects are bound to doe, in defence of their King and Country: and therefore desired not to take their liues, nor deliuer them to the King of Tarnata. He promised, at his intreaty, not any one of them should die, nor be deliuered to the King of Tarnata, but that he would ship them away to Manallia. The General gaue him thanks, taking leaue of them, and came rowing along the shore, by the kings towne, where he tooke in the Captain of the Fort, & brought him along with him aboard, where he both supped and lodged, and from him had the trueth, of all the fight, farre differing from that which the Hollanders reported. The Generall told him his going to the Dutch Admirall was, principally to intreat him, to shew mercy vnto the Portingales: which he promised to performe. The Captaine gaue him great thanks for the care he had of them, saying, now all their hope rested vpon him: and vpon the same, hee presented the Generall with a small Ruby set in a ring, praying him to weare it for his sake: which the General would not take, saying, what he could doe for them, was in Christian charity, and not for reward.

The 10 day, in the morning, our Generall went aboard the Hollands Admirall, to see if he could bring the King of Tarnata and the King of Tydore, and the Hollanders to a peace. The Dutch admirall made answer, the King of Tarnata would bee very hardly drawne to any peace with the King of Tydore, but he for his part would be willing thereunto: and if it pleased the King of Tydore, to repaire aboard his ship, hee should safely come and go, to haue conference with him. The Generall thought, he could perswade him to come

The last East-Indian Voyage.

come aboard his owne shippe, so that he would leaue two duch Captaines ashore in pledge for him. But to come aboard his ship, he was sure he would not. So the Dutch Admiral sent two of his chiefe Marchants with the General, to be left as pledges, if the King would come aboard: whereupon our Generall went to the king of Tydore, and told him what he had done in his behalfe, perswading him to come aboard our shippe, which he was loath to yeeld to. The Generall seeing him feareful, told him, there was no such cause, for that he had brought two Dutch Captaines, to remaine as pledges, and that he would leaue his brother with them. Then the King was willing, and caused his own boate to be fitted, & imbarked himselfe. Being ready to put off, came the Kings sister, and his son weeping as if he had gone to death, detayned him in this manner halfe an houre. In the end he put off, but when he was halfe way betweene the shore and the ship, he saw a Carricole rowing off from the Fort: which he stood in feare of, and would proceed no further, but returned backe, promising the next daye to come aboard, if we would ride with our ship nearer his towne.

The 11. day, in the morning we weighed, and anchored againe before the Kings towne. The General with his pledges going a shore, there was an alarum in the town, which was sodainly done: the cause was, that a great number of the Tarnataes had consorted to go robbe some out-houses in the Kings towne, and finding nothing therein set them a fire. The Tydorians gaue a sodaine assault vpon them, and had the cutting off, of a dozen of their heads: all the rest hardly escaped by running away. The heads they presented to the King, our Generall standing by him, telling him the cause. The King seemed to be offended with the Hollanders, which had promised that no hostility of warre, should bee offered in this time of parlye. The Holland's Captaints which were in our Pinnasse seeing the heads, were in no small feare of their owne. After the rumor was appeased, the King imbarcked himselfe with our Generall, and the Captaine of the Fort. The Dutch Marchants, and Captain Middleton rowed a shore for Pledges, but the King and our Generall came aboard our ship, where they stayed the comming of the Dutch Admirall: who comming aboard was brought downe to the King, in the Generalls cabbin, and they saluted one the other very friendly. After some little pause, the King said, whereas at your first comming hither you sent me word, your comming was not to harme mee, nor any of my subiects, but to expell the Portingalls your enemies out of the land, and make the place open for trade for al nations, and therefore you desired I should not take with them against you: which I performed till such time I did see my mortall enemy, the King of Tarnata ioyne with you, so that I was inforced to arme my selfe against him, who I know desireth nothing so much as the overthrowe and subuersion of my estate, and therefore you haue iust cause not to blame me for arming my selfe and people, against the inuasion of my mortall enemy. And now seeing you haue the vpper hand of your enemies the Portingalles, it resteth in your power to dispose of them as you shall thinke good. Now you haue your desire of them, I would know whether you will haue peace, or ioyne with the King of Tarnata against me. The Dutch Admirall answered, his cōming was only to expel the Portingals: which he thāked God, was now in his power. And for peace, he said it was the thing he desired with al princes in those parts, & that he wold doe what in him did lie to make an agreement, betweene the King of Tarnata & him. The King answered, that he desired a good peace, but it could hardly be: for that any slight occasion, was dayly cause of breach betweene thē. Therefore he desired the Hollanders, they wold take part with neither, & he doubted not, he should haue as goodd as he brought. The Admirall answered, he would do what he could, to make an agreement: which if he could not bring to passe, he promised the King (taking our Generall to witnes) that he would take part with neither of thē. Which speeches greatly contented the King, who excusing himselfe of not being well, tooke leaue and went a shore. After the King was gone, came the Capraine of the Fort, looking very heauilie, as he had iust cause: which the Dutch Admirall seeing, tooke him by the hand, bad him bee of good cheere, telling him that it was the chance of war, and that the fury being nowe gone, he minded to deale friendly with him and all the Portingals: Willing him to repaire aboard, where he should be welcome, and safely go and come. The Captain gaue him thanks, for his kindenes. So dinner being ready, & the pledges come from the shore, they dined all with our Generall, & departed euery man to his home. The 12. day being sunday, the Portingal captain with 6. of the principall of thē, came aboard to dine with our General, intreating him to go with thē

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The last East-Indian Voyages.

to the Dutch admiral, & be a meanes to hasten their departure, which he did, and at his intreaty they were sent away in three Pinnasses and a frigate, to Matillia, for which they gaue the Generall great thanks.

The 12. day, the Generall sent his Pinnasse to Tarnata, with prouision of victualls to our men which were there. & they returned the next day, & brought our Generall worde of the death of his seruant Iohn Abell, for whom he was very sory.

This 13. day our Generall and the Maister went to the King of Tornata, to know whether hee would let him leaue a factory in his Ilād of Tarnata? He answered, he should, but willed him to returne the next day, for that he would call a counsell concerning the matter, and then would giue them an answer. Frō thence the Generall went aboard the Dutch Admirall, and there told him, how the king of Tarnata had promised he should haue a factory there: yet neuerthelesse, if he would buy such wares as we had left, and make payment at Bantam, he should haue them. Who answered, he thought the King of Tarnata would not forget himselfe so much, as to graunt vs a Factory, considering he had written to his excellency, and likewise promised him, that they would trade with no nation but with them. And as touching our commodities, he would not deale withall, for that they had two ships which were sent, one to Bengalla, and the other to Cambia, to buy such commodities, which they dayly expected. Our Generall said, he had no reasō to crosse him, for leauing a factory there, for that Sir Francis Drake had trade in Tarnata, before the names of the Hollanders were knowne in those parts of the world.

So

at Tornata
for factory
done

The last East-Indian Voyage.

So, for that time they parted, either part to take their best aduantage for their aduentures. The 14. day, the Generall went againe to the King, to know his answer concerning his factory. He found him aboard a Carti- cole & one of the Dutch Captaines in his company. The Generall told him, his coming was according to his appointment. The king made present answer, he could grāt him no factory, for that he had made promise by writing, and word to the Hollanders, that no nation should haue trade with him or his people, but onely they. The Generall demanded, why he had not told him so, when he saued him from the Tydorians? and then he could haue told what to haue done. He said, both he and his subiects were willing we should tarry there, But the Hollanders did still vrge his promise. The Generall seeing he could not leaue a factory, desired him to send such order to Tarnata, that hee might haue leaue to carry those small quantity of cloues as his factors had bought and payed for, aboard, and he would trouble neither him nor the Hollanders. The king answered, that within seauen dayes he would be there himselfe, desiring the Generall, to ride still. He made answer, he liued at too great charges to lye still, and doe nothing, and therefore could stay no longer, but wold be gone the next morning: and so departed from him.

The 19. day, the Generall went a land, and tooke his leaue of the King of Tydore, and al his Noble men and all the Portingals, they being all sory for his departure.

The 20. day, we weighed in the morning, for Tarnata and at 5. a clocke in the euening, came to an anchor againe again on the north-east side of Tydore. This day died of the fluxe Thomas Richmond.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

now by Ternate
The 21. day, at 4. of the Clocke in the morning we weighed, and about 10. a clocke, came to an anchor in Ternate rode in 16. Fadomes, sayre by one of the Dutch ships, which two dayes before vs came from Tydore. this ship was to take in her lading of Cloues here. This after noone, the Generall sent his Pinasse, to knowe, if the King had sent word to the Sabendor to see the deliury of such cloues, as was there of ours. The pinasse brought word, M. Browne was very sick, and all the company which were with him. This after noone came aboard to our Generall, the Kings vncke of Tarnata called Chichell Gegogoe. To this man our generall told, how vnkindly he had beene vsed by the King and the Hollanders, and howe the King would neither giue him leaue to buy cloues, whiles he tarried here, nor permit him to leaue a factory there, contrary to the promise he made him, when hee saued both him & the Hollands factors, frō enemies hands: which good turne both the one and the other haue quite forgotten: likewise he said he thought the king had beene as our Kings in Christiandome are, which neuer will promise any thing, but they will performe it. Chichell Gegogoe hearing this, said, he would that night go to the King, and then would tell him how much he did dishonour himselfe, to be so ouer-ruled by the Hollanders, and therefore willed the Generall not to haue doubt of leauing a factory, and likewise to trade so long, as they tarried here in the despite of the Hollanders. And vpon the same, seeming to be angry, he departed, promising the next day day to returne againe. This man could speake Portugais, wherby the General let him vnderstand his mind to the full. He knew Sir Francis Drake, when he was at Tarnata, and had beene aboard his ship with him.

The last East-Indian Voyages.

The 22. day, the Generall sent his brother againe to the towne, to know if the Sabendor were come from the King with order to deliuer the cloues. Captaine Middleton found him now come to towne, & brought him to our Generall, who told him, he had order to deliuer the cloues, and likewise that hee should haue free liberty to buy and sell aswell as the Hollanders: & that the King desired the Generall not to depart til he came, which should be shortly after the messenger. All this friendship Chiche Gegogoe procured. The Sabendor and his two sonnes supped and lodged in the Generalls cabin that night.

The 26. being sunday, Chiche Gegogoe was al after-noon with the General in his cabin, where he feasted him, in the best manner he could, & gaue him a very faire caliuier set with bone & many other things.

The 28. day, the pinnaffe went to the towne, to fetch such cloues away as the Marchants should buye. The Generall or his brother, stil going or comming in her, at this time it was Captaine Middletons chance to be in her, & as he and the Marchants were busie buying & weighing of cloues, in came a Tarnatan, & told them, that there was a man that was indebted vnto vs, that had brought a Canoa laden with cloues, to pay his debts, & the Hollanders had both carried him and the cloues to their house, because the mā was likewise indebted vnto the. Our men ran with weapons, but she was gone before they came, or else if they had not made the more hast, they had not carried them away so easily as they did. The marriners were hired by one of those factors, whose head the Generall so lately had saved, for a Royall of 8. a man, to do this braue exploit, at their comming aboard. They told the Generall, how the Holland factors vsed the, which hee tooke very cull.

The 29. day, the Generall went to the towne with 20. armed men, some shot, and some pikes, and Halberis: and at his coming, he sent word to the Dutch-house, they should restore the cloues they had taken away. They told our Generall, that the party had bin in their debt these two yeares, and they could not get him to any paiement, & that the King had made proclamation, that no man, that was indebted vnto the Hollanders, should sell him any cloues, yet neuertheless they would not be their owne iudges, but would stand to the iudgement of the King, when he should come: & the cloues to remaine in the Sabendors hands, till the matter was tried. So the General was pacified, threatning to giue the bastinado to the factor which was the cause: but after that time, he durst not passe by our dores. This breach betwixt vs and the Hollanders, caused the king to make the more haste, for that hee doubted we wold go by the eares with the, & hauing very few men in the towne, he doubted the worst, for that the Hollanders, are not beloued of the countrye people: the cause is, their manyfold disorder in their drunkennes, against men, but principally against the women. The first of Iune, about 1. of the clock at night, came a Caracole from Tydore, rowing by our ship, calling to the watch. The Generall hearing it,

knew

knew it was the King that spake, and rose out off his bed, & saluted him by his name: the King did the like to him, & asked him, how he knew him in the darke. The Generall by his interpretor said, that he knew him by his voice: which caused him to laugh. And so spending some little time in talking, he willed our Generall to meete him at the towne in the morning. The Generall gaue him 5. peeces of Ordinance at his departure, which he tooke very kindly. They delight much to heare ordinance to go off at pleasure so that they be not at the cost. When it was day, the General went to the towne, & had not staid in his house halfe an houre, but the king came, & spent al the forenoone with him. The Generall was desirous to know of him, whether he should leaue a factory or no. He answered he could not tell, for that it was to be determined by a counsell: which he had not leasure to cal as yet, by reason of much businesse. He said, the Hollanders did threaten him to forsake his coutry, & to establish a factory at Tydore, if he did let the *Englisht*arry in the country, and establish a factory. They saying we were theeues, & robbers: and so if he did trust vs, he should finde vs: saying that Holland was able to set out 20. ships, for Englands one, and that the King of Holland was stronger by sea, then all Christiandome besides: with many vntueths of their owne people & Countries commendations, & the disparagement of our people and country, and of al other Christian princes. If this frothy nation may haue the trade of the Indias to themselves, which is the thing they hope for, their pride & insolencie wilbe intollerable. The Generall answered, what Hollander so euer hee were that had *for 8. a wonder

the land*

told his highnesse so, he lied like a traytor: & said, he would iustifie it to their faces: and for their country, if the Queenes maiesty of England had not pittied their ruine, in sending her forces to withstand the Spaniards, their country had bin ouer-run, & they marked in the faces for traitors and slaues many yeares ago. And therefore desired the King, to inquire of a Spanish Renegado, which was in the towne, & he would certifie him of the truth. Then the Generall demanded, whether he should haue those Cloues which the Flemings had carried away by force. Hee answered, we should haue so many of the as should paie the debt, & the Hollanders should haue the rest: which was in the afternoone performed. The king told our General, that the morrow he must returne for Tidore, where he must spend 3. or 4. daies, before he could returne. In the meane time he gaue him leaue, to buy & sell with his people: And at his returne, he should haue an answer whether he should leaue a factory or no. The general intreating him, whilest he tarried in the country, hee would let him haue a house to lodge in, where hee might be nere his businesse, and not be forced euery night to go aboard. The king promised he should, and so tooke his leaue & departed. An houre after he sent his Sabendor to the Generall, who brought him to a faire chamber, the king sending him a faire gilded bedsted, & a Turkie carpet to lie vpon: so after that, the Generall was not enforced euery night to go aboard, as before time he had done. The 2. day about 8. a clocke at night, came a light prawe of Tidore aboard, with a letter to our General: the effect was, that the king of Tidore found himselfe agreed with the Hollanders,

for

The last East-Indian Voyage.

for taking part with the King of Tarnata against him: & that vpon his sending away of the Portingales they had shot into his towne, demanding Taffasoa to be surrendered to procure his peace. The General answered, he thought he needed not feare the Holländers, for that their shipping would shortly be disposed of, to other places, & that at any time, for that towne (if so it need) he might make his peace. With which answer they returned, making a bold attempt, to either come or go, the sea being full of their enemies. The 5. day the King of Tarnata, & the Hollanders admirall came frō Tarnata, to cōclude of our banishment. The 6. day the king sent our Generall word, that both hee and the Dutch admirall should come face to face, before him & his counsell, to heare what either could say against other. The Generall sent the king word, he had nothing to say against the Dutch, vnlesse he withstood his leauing of a factory there: which if he did, he desired his highnes, that they might meete face to face, before him, to heare what either could say: the king set word, it should be so. The Dutch admiral came to our generalls chāber, to visit him. Our Generall asked, whether he came to procure his banishment? He answered, he was bound to do the best he could for his aduēturers. The Generall told him, the king was minded the next day to know, why we should not haue a factory in the country as wel as they. He said he would challenge the kings owne writing and promise. The 7. day the Generall waited, to be sent for, to the King: but seeing no body came, he sent to know the reason. He sent word, he was very busie that day, and could not intend it till the morrow. The Dutch admiral had conferēce with the King twice this day: where belike he had what he desired, for as soone as night came hee departed for Tydore.

*an foyls
or to be fong*
The 8. day, the King sent his secretary, and one of the Dutch Marchants vnto him, with a letter sealed with hard waxe, which seale had two letters, an H & a B. which stood for Hance Beerepot, with a Marchants marke betweene the letters. This letter they deliuered, and told him, it was the Kings letter to the King of England. The Generall would not belecue, the King would send so great a Prince as the King of England, a letter with so little state, and a Marchants seale vpon it. They answered: and if he doubted thereof, they would cause the King to come, and iustifie it: The Generall said, he would not otherwise belecue it. So they left the letter and departed. Halfe an houre after, came the King, & a great traine to our Generals chamber, where saluting him kindly, they sat downe vpon a trunck together. The King said, I sent you a letter sealed by my secretary, which you haue receiued, making doubt, it is not sent by mee, to so great a king, & deliuered with so little state, & sealed with a marchants seale. Now you heard me say thus much, I hope you are satisfied: the letter is sent by me, and none other, therefore prepare your selfe to morrow to bee gone. The General neither would, nor durst deliuer it to the King of England, willing him to take it againe, He would not, but departed.

The 9. Chichell Gegogoe the Kings vnkle, hearing how the Generall had bin vsed by the king & the Hollanders, came to visit him at his chamber, where there passed much talke betweene the concerning the foresaid counterfeite counterfeit letter, intended to haue bin sent (to the disgrace of the Generall) to the king of England. Chichell Gegogoe assuring the Generall, that if it lay in his power, he wold procure of the king, that they might leaue a factory there. Moreouer, that at his next returne to him, he should know the cōtents of that base & slanderous letter, inuented by the Hollanders: & so he departed, with promise to returne the next day. The people of the cōūtry, vnderstāding the Hollanders had procured our banishment, were much offended that the petty prince of Holland, and his (whom they esteemd but debaushed drūkards) should be esteemed before the mighty King of England, & his subiects: & knowing we were commanded to depart, brought all their commodities to vs, & none to the Hollanders. Whereat they finding themselves agreed, caused our beame that we weighed cloutes with, to be taken away: but it was restored againe, by the meanes of Chichell Gegogoe. Which the Hollanders perceiuing, they sent to their admiral at Tydore, to returne to Tarnata: which he did, threatning the King, that he would leaue him, and establish a factory at Tydore. Wherevpon the King with the vnwilling consent of his counsell, gaue order for our banishment: sending the Sabendor to our Generall, to will him to linger no longer but to depart aboard.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

The 16. day towards euening, the king of Tarnata with a great company of his Nobles, came downe from the towne, landing right against our shippe, and caused a tent to be set vp: sending for our Generall to come a shore, which he presently did. The King caused him to sit downe by him, excusing himselfe, that that we left not a factory there, alleaging, that the Hollanders inforst him to the contrary: he and his subjects owing them much, which he hoped to pay the next harvest: & that thē he would take an other order with them: which being done he caused a letter to be read by his Secretary openly, the contents whereof follow at the end of the booke. Sealing it vp, he deliuered it to the General, intreating him to returne, and he shold be welcome. Who answered, that it was in vaine for the English to returne thither, so long as the Hollanders bare rule, holding it a disparagement to his nation, to giue place to them, being so farre their inferiours. This communication ended, by the sodaine comming of a great many of lights, and in the midst, one of his chiefe Noble men, vnder a Canopy: carrying in a platter of gold, couered with a couerture of cloth of gold, the letter which was before so publickly read: and the Generall looking earnestly, not knowing what the matter was, the King called vnto him, willing him to arise, and receiue the letter he sent to the King of England. Which he presently doing, the party which carried it, made lowe obeisance, after their country fashion, and then deliuered it to the Generall: which he kissing receiued, and sat him downe againe by the King. Giuing him thanks in doing our king & himself that right, in deliuering the letter in such sort as it ought to be. The king answered this letter which you haue, is vnsealed, and written in the Malaya tongue, to the intent at Bantam it might bee interpreted by some of your owne people, which haue learned that language, But the other was inuented by the Hollanders, to haue done you iniury: telling him in brieft the effect thereof:

The last East-Indian Voyage.

of Formosa
for
the English

sent by Panglo

The last East-Indian Voyage.

excusing himselfe that hee had no good thing to send the King of England, but onely a Bahar of Cloues, which he hoped his Maiestie would accept in good part, considering his contrey yeelds no other thing of worth. Likewise hee bestowed vpon our Generall a Bahar of cloues, and caused them presently to be carried to the Boate: which done, hee tooke his leaue, and departed aboard his Caracole. The 17. day, the King of Tarnata came roing about our ship, and diuers of his women with him in a Caracole; the Generall eutreating him to come aboard, but he would not. Chichell Geogoe came aboard this afternoone to our General, certifying him that the contents of the Hollanders counterseit Letter was, that we had solde powder, great ordinance, and other munition to the Portugalls. And more, that to their great hurt in the fight, we had assisted them with Gunnners, and that was the cause we left not a Factory there, hoping the Generall would haue carried and deliuered it to his owne disgrace: but he suspecting their slaunderous trecherie, refused it.

The 18. day the King and his Vncle came aboard in a small Prawe, because he would not haue the Hollanders which rid by vs to know of his being there, for it was death to them to see him vse our Generall kindly: their comming was to take leaue of our Generall, he desired them to come downe to his Caben, and made them a banquet, whih they kindly did accept, and spent most part of the day with him, vrging our Generall to returne thither againe, or at the leastwise to send, and he or they should be welcome, doe the Hollanders what they could, with protestation, that both he and all his people were very sorry for his departure,

the King
said
found
Four

The last East-Indian Voyage.

finding we were good people, and not such as the Hollanders did report vs to be, which liued only by robbing and stealing. During this communication, the Holland ship which rid by vs shot off three peeces, which the King hearing, sent to know the caule, word was brought, the Hollanders Admirall was come from Tydore and gone aboard, which the King hearing, tooke a short farewell of our generall, and went to his caracole: shewing evidently his great feare to offend the Hollanders. Before he could put off his boate from the side, our ship was vnder sayle: giuing him seuen peeces of ordinance, and helde on our way betweene Tarnata and Tydore. About noone the 21. day we came to an anker at Taffasoa: the Gouvernour presently came to our Generall with a present of hennes, and fruite, telling him that he had been at Tydore, and the King had giuen him order to surrender the towne vnto him, if he came thither againe, and the fort, praying him to dispose thereof as his owne. The Generall gaue him thanks, telling him he had fewe men, but if he had so many as he had when he came from Bantam, he would leaue such a garrison there, as they should doubt neither the Hollanders nor the Tarnatanes: but his weakenesse was such, that hee could leaue no men there. He answered, he doubted not the keeping of the towne in dispite of all their enemies: and although he could leaue no mē there, yet had he order by his king to surrender his right and title to the King of England, to whose vse he would keepe it, desiring the surrender thereof might be drawne, and the Generall should haue the originall and he the copie. Which done he caused the people to bring those Cloues they had, & so tooke

his

at Taffasoa
the Gouvernour
English

The last East-Indian Voyage.

his leaue and departed, we directing our course for Selebis, where wee had such water as the place afforded, but it was brakish, buyng some Cocus of the people who are like Iauans.

July the 24. we came to anker in Bantan road, were master Scot chiefe factor there, certified our Generall of the mortallitie of men in the Hector, and Ascension before they departed, so that he was forced to hyer Chineses to helpe them home, and that of 24 left there in their factorie, 12. were dead, where we continued till the sixt of October: which day hauing taken leaue of M. Scot, and the rest left there, we set saile for England, continuing in our course with variable weather till the 19. of December, which day the winde scanting vpon vs we thought to put into Saldania roade: about 10. a clock in the morning we saw a sayle to leewards, thinking it had been the Ascension, whose company we lost 14. dayes before, but contrary to our expectation it prooued the Hector, which went in company of the Susan from Bantan about 9. months before, in such lamentable distresse, that had we not met with them that day, they had purposed the next to haue run theselues aground at Penguin Iland, hauing for that purpose fardled vp their apparrel, & such other things as were most necessary for them. Our General caused our Pinnelle to be hoysted out and sent for Cap: Keeling & the Purser who related their extreme miseries, hauing but 10. Englismen and 4 Chineses aliue: so supper deing done, with thankes giuen to God for their miraculous preservation, our General sent 12. men more to help the into Saldania road, where we stayed repairing the ruines of the Hector, & prouiding other necessaries til the 16.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

of Iannary following, when we set sayle for Saint Helena, where wee arriued the second of February following: the eleuenth of February we departed from Saint Helena continuing at Sea with such varytie of weather, as those that vse the sea are vsually accustomed vnto, till the second of May following when we were of Plymouth: and the sixt following at the Downes.

FINIS.

The King of Tarnata, to the King of England, Scotland, France and IRELAND, &c.

Hearing of the good report of your Maiestie, by the comming of the great Captain Francis Drake, in the time of my father, which was about some 30. yeeres past: by the which Captaine, my Predecessor did send a Ring vnto the Queene of England, as a token of remembrance betweene Vs: which if the aforesaide Drake had beene liuing, hee could haue informed your Maiestie of the great loue and friendship of either side: bein the behalfe of the Queene: my Father for him and his Successors. Since which time of the departure of the aforesaid Captaine, we haue dayly expected his returne, my Father liuing many yeeres after and dayly expecting his returne, and I after the death of my father haue liued in the same hope, till I was father of eleuen children: in which time I haue beene informed that the English were men of so bad disposition that they came not as peaceable Merchants, but to dispossesse them of there Countrey: which by the comming of the bearer hereof wee haue found to the contrarie, which greatly we reioyce at. And after many yeeres of our expectation of some English forces by the promise of Captaine Drake; Here arriued certaine ships which we well hoped had beene Englishmen, but finding them contrary, and being out of al hope of succour of the English Nation, we were inforced to write to the Prince of Holland, to craue ayde and succour against our auncient enemies the Portingals, and according to our request hee hath sent hither his forces which hath expeld all the Portugales out of the forces which they held at Amboyna and Tydore. And whereas your Maiestie hath sent to me a most kinde and friendly Letter by your seruant Captaine Henry Middleton, that doth not alittle reioyce vs.

The last East-Indian Voyage.

And whereas Captaine Henry Middleton was desirous to leane a factory heere, we were very willing therunto, which the Captain of the Hollanders understanding, he came to challenge me of a former promise which I had writen to the Prince of Holland: that if he would send me such succour as should expell the Portugales out of these parts, that no other Nation should haue trade heere but they onely. So that we were inforst against our liking to yeeld vnto the Hollanders Captaines request for this time: whereof we craue pardon of your Highnesse: and if any of your Nation come hereafter, they shall be welcome. And whereas the chiefe Captaine of the Hollanders doth sollicite vs, not to hold any friendship with your Nation, nor to giue care to your Highnesse Letters: yet for all their suite, if you please to send hither againe, you shall be welcome. And in token of our friendship, which we desire of your Maiestie, we haue sent you a small remembrance of a Bahar of Cloues, our Countrey being poore, and yeelding no better commoditie, which we pray your Highnesse to accept in good part.

TARNATA.

The King of Tydors Letter to the KINGS MAIESTIE OF ENGLAND.

His Writing of the King of Tydor to the King of England, is to let your Highnesse vnderstand that the King of Holland hath sent hither into these partes a Fleet of shippes to ioyne with our ancient enemy the King of Tarnata, and they ioyntly together, haue ouer-runne and spoyled part of our Countrey, and are determined to destroy both vs and our Subiects. Nowe vnderstanding by the bearer hereof, Captaine Henry Middleton, that your Highnesse is in friendship with the King of Spaine, Wee desire your MAIESTIE that you would take pittie of Vs, that wee may not be destroyed by the King of Holland and Tarnata to whom wee haue offered no wrong: but they by forceable meanes seeke to bereaue Vs of our Kingdome. And as great Kings vpon the earth are ordayned by God to succour all them that be wrongfully oppressed: so I appeale vnto your MAIESTIE, for succour against my enemies; not doubting but to finde reliefe at your MAIESTIES haqds. And if your MAIESTIE send hither, I humbly entreate that it may bee Captaine Henry Middleton or his Brother, with whom I am well acquainted.

Thus We end, praying God to enlarge your Kingdomes,
and blesse You, and all your Counsels.

TYDOR

The King of Bantam, to the King of ENGLAND.

LETTER giuen from your friend the king of Bantam, to the king of England,
Scotland, France, and Ireland: desiring GOD to preferue your health, and to exalt you more and more, and all your Counsell. And whereas your MAIESTIE hath sent a generall, Henry Middleton, he came to me in health.
I did heare that your MAIESTIE was come to the Crowne of England, which doth greatly reioyce my heart. Now England and Bantam are both as one.
I haue also receiued a Present from your MAIESTIE:
the which I giue you many thanks for your kindnesse.
Idoe send your MAIESTIE two Beasar stones, the one waying fourteene Masses the other three: And so GOD haue you in his keeping.

Bantam

